

Liberal Arts College

Public Lecture

Emma Goldman in Russia: Reflections on the "Bolshevik Myth"

Dr. Alice R. Wexler

Dr. Alice R. Wexler was educated at Stanford University and Georgetown University (B.A. and M.A.), and received her doctorate from Indiana University. She taught at Sonoma State University and University of California, Riverside until 1989. She held both Fulbright and National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowships. Dr. Wexler's publications on social history, feminism, and medical issues are extensive; her major area of specialization, however, is the life and thought of Emma Goldman. In addition to many articles and conference presentations on Emma Goldman, she has published two books: Emma Goldman in America (New York, Boston, and London, 1984), and Emma Goldman in Exile (Boston, 1989), both of which enjoyed considerable critical acclaim. Dr. Wexler's current project is entitled History, Heredity, and Huntington's Disease, forthcoming from Times Books/Random House.

Time: Thursday, 12 March, 1992
8:30 p.m.
Place: Hall Building, Room H-110,
1455 de Maisonneuve Blvd. West
Tel.: 848-2573

Admission Free

Concordia
UNIVERSITY

